

THE MELLON RESEARCH INITIATIVE

Environments & Societies: History, Literature, and Justice

Fall 2013 Colloquium Series

Wednesdays 4-6pm, 126 Voorhies Hall
University of California, Davis

The colloquium seeks to build cross-disciplinary collaboration in the environmental humanities and humanistic social sciences to rethink human-nature interactions that are critical to meeting the environmental challenges of our era. Colloquium participants should plan to download and read the discussion paper one week before the colloquium at:
<http://environmentsandsocieties.ucdavis.edu/upcoming-events/>

"Clams, Dams, and the Desiccation of Seventeenth-Century New England"

Nov. 6
Chris Pastore
History, University of Montana

"Paradoxical Green: Literature and Environment"

Nov. 13
Karen Thornber
Comparative Literature, Harvard University

"Forging the Climate Movement: Environmental Activism and the Keystone XL Pipeline"

Nov. 20
Robert Wilson
Geography, Syracuse University

"Visual Captures: Aesthetics, Politics and the Census of Marine Life"

Dec. 4
Stacy Alaimo
English, University of Texas, Arlington

More information is available at:
<http://environmentsandsocieties.ucdavis.edu/>

Photo © Sophie Moore 2013