

Environments & Societies

Spring 2016

Colloquium Series
Wednesdays 4-6pm

The Colloquium seeks to build cross-disciplinary collaboration in the environmental humanities and humanistic social sciences to undertake the broad rethinking of human-nature interactions that are critical to meeting the environmental challenges of our era. Colloquium participants should plan to read the discussion paper before the colloquium. To receive the paper, please email nmperrone@ucdavis.edu.

April 6 Tennyson's Elegy for the Anthropocene: Genre, Form, and Species Being
Jesse Oak Taylor
English, University of Washington
126 Voorhies

April 13 Smoking Horses: Meskwaki Migration and Adaptation on the 19th Century Prairie
Ryan Fischer
History, University of Wisconsin - River Falls
DHI Conference Room, 228 Voorhies

April 20 Mystifying Cotton: Toward an (Eco)Critique of Histories of American Capitalism
Britt Rusert
African American Studies, University of Massachusetts - Amherst
126 Voorhies

April 27 Meat
Christopher Otter
History, Ohio State University
126 Voorhies

May 11 Toxic Waters: Sea Level Rise and Environmental Justice in Late Industrial San Francisco
Lindsey Dillon
American Studies, University of California, Davis
DHI Conference Room, 228 Voorhies

May 18 Submersion: Maritime Futures of a Multispecies Anthropocene
Elizabeth DeLoughrey
English, University of California, Los Angeles
DHI Conference Room, 228 Voorhies