

Environments & Societies

Winter 2016
Colloquium Series

Wednesdays 4-6pm, Voorhies 126

The Colloquium seeks to build cross-disciplinary collaboration in the environmental humanities and humanistic social sciences to undertake the broad rethinking of human-nature interactions that are critical to meeting the environmental challenges of our era. Colloquium participants should plan to read the discussion paper before the colloquium. To receive the paper please email raegli@ucdavis.edu.

February
10

Frozen Empires: An Environmental History of the Antarctic Peninsula

Adrian Howkins
History, Colorado State University

February
24

Dispossessing the Drylands: Why Environmental Science and Critical Realism Matter for a Sustainable Future

Diana Davis
History, University of California, Davis

March
2

Fire and Climax: Bureaucratic Divisions of Scientific Labor

Nathan Sayre
Geography, University of California, Berkeley

March
9

The Viral Creep: Elephants and Herpes in Times of Extinction

Celia Lowe
Anthropology, University of Washington

More information is available at:
environmentsandsocieties.ucdavis.edu

© Chris Devaraj (flickr.com/photos/chrisdevaraj/)